The cake tin was too small or the oven is too high. Problem: My cake is very dense. This could be because the cake mixture didn't have enough air beaten into it or perhaps eggs were added too quickly and curdled. Another reason could be that there wasn't enough raising agent. Problem: My cake is flat and has large air bubbles on the top.

Egg-leavened cakes like angel food cake or genoise will rise better in a pan with ungreased sides so the cake can cling and climb up the sides of the pan. The same thing goes for gluten-free cakes, they need to hold onto the sides. Non-egg-leavened cakes are usually fine in a pan that's been thoroughly greased. Annabelle@KAF Reply
